

Tours & Activities

Everyone likes to tour the local area while attending conferences and events in unfamiliar cities or towns. Why not add to this by showing off what the locals are doing to help Mother Earth?! Tour the local recycling plant, or find out what the area is doing to be green.

Take your group to a homeless shelter or food kitchen to donate some time. Or head to a nearby park and spend the afternoon planting trees for carbon off-setting.

Another fun option for team-building is helping needy children fix used bikes that have been donated for their use. Not only will you be helping people, but you can pick up some basic skills and learn to work together in a new environment!

Did You Know?

The University of Maryland College Park campus is an Arboretum and Botanical Garden. Ask about planning a tree walk or visit the Rain Gardens during your next meeting or conference held on campus!
